Arrangements for Motor-Driven Apparatus at $5,000-J. Irving Maxson's Success on the Isle of Pines-Narragansett Council Represented at State K. of C. Council.

Just at this time when there is agitation for the formation of a board of public works in Westerly, to include highways with the water and contemplated sewer systems, further investigation of the public roads in Rhode Island are to be made by the repartment of agriculture. Expert engineers of the government will do the work in cooperation with the state highway department. Within a short time these investigations will be made in the towns of Westerly, Foster and Middletown. The work of investigation which will be along economic lines will cover the whole council and chairman of the highway committee. Mr. Langworthy made a report of highway work that was indeed creditable, and for the time put the quietus on the scheme for a board of public works.

When the resolution directing the state legislature to secure passage of necessary law that would permit Westerly to have a board of public works was under discussion, Senator Arnold paid a deserved compliment to his local political opponent, Mr. Langworthy, aithough both are of the same republican party. Senator Arnold said the

The leie of Pines Appeal, published at Nueva Genoa, Isle of Pines, devotes a couple of columns to the remarkable upbuilding at Westport of the Isle of Pines Cooperative Fruit Company's plantation. It is described as the largest of pine apple fields with Company's plantation. It is described as the largest of pine apple fields, with over 77,000 plants, of which 30,000 will fruit in May and June of this year and will increase within two years from 400,000 to 600,000 pine apple plants. Besides the pines, acres of potatoes and onlons have been raised, there are 25,000 grape fruit trees. Plans are now being made for the erection of a canning factory on the plantation, oll of which is in the charge of General Manager J. Irving Maxson, formerly of Westerly, The Appeal says: of General Manager J. Irving Maxson, formerly of Westerly. The Appeal says:

"Maxson! Who is Maxson? Where did he come from? How does it happen that Maxson has become so prominent a personality of the Isle of Pines? It is told in a nutshell. It is only necessary to talk to Bos Maxson a little while in order to get his measure; busy every minute, laying out new work here and there, supervising the building of bridges, new roads, giving orders to the several foremen in various parts of the plantations and seeing that they are carried out.

When the resolution directing the state legislature to secure passage of necessary law that would permit Westerly to have a board of public works was under discussion, Senator Arnold paid a deserved compliment to his local political opponent, Mr. Langworthy, although both are of the same republican party. Senator Arnold said the resolution called for a general reform of the town government and that the taking of the highways from the custody of the town council might be all right in theory, yet every taxpayer should thoroughly understand the plan before reaching a decision, and therefore he favored the amendment of a committee of three to investigate and report a year hence, and the amendment prevailed.

The committee of the Westerly fire district selected to purchase motor-driven fire apparatus has arranged to secure what the members believe will prove two serviceable fire fighting machines of modern type for less than $5,000, although the sum appropriated was $6,000. In addition the committee has arranged for one practically new combination hose and chemical wagon and a chassis for the body of one of the hose wagons now in commission, which is even more than the fire district anticipated, as the vote making trict anticipated, as the vote making the appropriation stipulated two auto-mobile chassis and the utilization of the bodies of the two hose wagons.

The machine will be painted and decorated and the committee believes will combine beauty and efficiency. The cost will be about one-half of that of a modern American LaFrance standard with that machine completely equipmed furnished and guaranteed for equipped, furnished and guaranteed for service. The Maxim Motor company claims that, the cost being considered, their product is the equal of any fire apparatus manufactured.

When the Cyclone autochemical machine is delivered the wagon of the Rhode Island Ones will be transformed into a motor-driven apparatus. The chassis of both will be identical and each.

A contract has been closed with the Maxim Motor company of Middleboro, Mass, and the new wagon is to be delivered in about a month. The Cyclone wagon has been shipped to the company's plant, and under the contract the company is privileged to use the chemical tank in the construction of the new machine, or any other part of the Cyclone wagon and equipment that will prove to be as good as if new. The chemical tank will be nickel plated and the now brass rails will be nickeled, as will also the portable fire extinguishers, lanterns, etc. The contractors agree to have this wagon equal to an entirely new machine in

JEWETT CITY

Scientific Butterfat Testing-Death of Miss Edna Norton, Woman of Mystery-Social and Personal Notes.

At the Jewett City creamery, by regular Bahcock test, is determined the amount of butterfat in the cream furamount of butterfat in the cream fur-nished to the creamery by the many patrons in the outlying districts. A sample of each patron's cream is kept from each day's supply and preserved by the addition of potassium dichro-mate for two weeks; then the test is made. B. C. Bliss, the buttermaker. with a small pipette puts into little bottles with long graduated necks 18 cubic centimeters of cream, to which is added a like quantity of sulphuric acid and a small quantity of warm distilled water. These bottles are placed in a wheel and revolved inside a cast iron case for five minutes at the rate of 1,000 revolutions per minute. The motive power is a jet of steam applied to a set of small buckets on the under side of the wheel, after the manner of the turbine engine. A certain per cent, of water is added again and the wheel turned for a minute more. Then in the graduated neck of the bottles is shown the per cent of butterfat. The basis of payment for cream is deduced from these tests by the buttermaker.

Twenty per cent of butterfat is a good test for average cream from the yats. A recent test of a patron's cream showed only 13 per cent. of butterfat; at the same time a local milk peddler's milk showed the high mark of 4 2-5 per cent. of butterfat. In order to balance the wheel a sample of buttermilk was tested and showed the least possible trace of butterfat, just a shade of color in the top of the tube.

The local creamery has between 50 and 50 patrons, who were paid 36 cents. and 60 patrons, who were paid 36 cents per pound for butterfat for January, which is a fine figure and well in advance of many eastern Connecticut creameries.

lector found registered on the can gauges. In June, 1891, a peculiar thing happened which would be impossible now when the late J. E. Leonard was superintendent of this creamery and the late M. G. Young was buttermaker. There came a report from one of the cream gatherers that the cream of a certain patron had increased to 27 and 28 spaces on two cans—13 on one and 30 on the other. The cream was tested 28 spaces on two cans—19 on one and 9 on the other. The cream was tested and found to contain 8 spaces of milk out of 28 spaces of supposed cream. Investigation showed that the man in question used two cans of a Cooley creamer for his milk. In the morning he had too much milk for one can and not enough for two; therefore he filled one about two-thirds full and the other a little above one-third. Then at night he would draw out what milk had separated from the two cans and pour the cream together into one. He would fill the empty can with night's milk, and if any remained in the pall (which there generally did) it would be poured into the can on top of the morning's cream. The consequence was that the milk which was poured into the can on top of the cream did not separate.

OBITUARY.

Miss Edna Norton. Miss Edna Norton.

Miss Edna Norton, 45, died at the home of Adolphus Moffat on Brown avenue Tuesday morning. The cause of her death is given as tuberculosis. She has been housekeeper for Mr. Moffat for about seven years, he having secured her at an employment bureau in Providence. All that ever could be learned of hergis that she was born in Albany in 1869. There was never anything learned of her parentage or relatives. Many who have employed her thing learned of her parentage or relatives. Many who have employed her in the borough say that there was plenty of evidence that she sprang from a more than ordinary family. Her life here has been a checkered one, with many misfortunes. A few years ago, more or less demented, she was picked up by the New London police. Her pictures appeared in the New London papers, she being characterized as the woman of mystery. At that time the matron of the New London jail found $300 secreted in her stocking. She was sent back here after her identity was established and has since made Moffat's her home. People here who knew her say she was much more who knew her say she was much more to be pitied than blamed.
